PLAIN DEALING.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1887.

The statement of the new judges in Wisconsin has been seen in time for the Democratic managers to use in the Fourth Wisconsin district, to the custody of Governor Rusk, by, of course, unduly influencing the voters. The people of the Fourth Wisconsin are either suspicious, ignorant, or dishonest fools, believing Gottlieb not the venerable Haggerty lawyers, and are about to be deceived by such persons. In Wisconsin the Tribune and the Leader, it seems as if they were influenced by some of the "people" of that persuasion the night of the election.

The money market was easy on the basis of 6 per cent for loans on the best security in this city. Sterling was rather stronger. Investment securities were dull. The local York stock market showed considerable strength on a quite large volume of transactions. The Chicago produce markets were fairly active, with more strength to grain, favored by higher quotations from the United Kingdom. Wheat took the lead in interest, with some of a good export movement at other points. Oil remained with Monday's quiet and the closing unchanged, but a shade easier, under 81 cents higher; corn 1¢ cent higher, oats steady, barley and rye firm, and flax seed fully 2 cents higher.

CAPTAIN DONOVAN FYFE, the Irish member of Parliament who has also himself up to a state from which he harangued Legal League audiences, is an Englishman by birth and a Tory Englishman to the Parnellite party. His father was a Church of England clergyman. He is a cousin of the Duke of Devonshire, Lord Harrington's father, and is described as a tall, dark, distinguished-looking man with a pronounced English accent. He is a great friend with the members Irish and has stated beforehand from his own district without opposition. He is one of the numerous Englishmen of whom the London Spectator complains. He has become more Irish than the Irish themselves.

In his interview in the New York about the secession of the members to Chicago, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain expressed a great truth which labor agitators ought to have in mind all the time. "I hold to very strongly," said Mr. Chamberlain, "that the first duty of a democracy is to keep their own law. Change it when it is wrong, but obey it while it is in force. Any disobedience to law is a calamity to masses in the Commonwealth." This is especially true in such a Commonwealth as America, where the working masses have such a power over legislation. If there is any wrong from which they suffer, being in the majority, they can provide a sufficient legal remedy. They effect against their own votes when they resort to illegality and violence. If there are any grievances against which they have cause of complaint they can have them removed by resort to the ballot-box. But if to set the workingmen, citizens of America, the great creed and violence, but a heterogeneous association of foreigners who do not know or understand or who to not want to know or understand anything in relation either to the Irish, our brethren, and liberty, who profit by excitement and live off agitation.

It is not likely that the rising in London will be renewed. Mr. Gladstone's action will be followed by the great bulk of the Liberal Unionists, and Tyrrell, the Parnellite leader, who is seeking to profit by the demonstration, if he tries to hold another meeting in Trafalgar square will hardly attract much of a crowd and can be easily dealt with. The disturbance of Sunday, however, raises several important issues for discussion during the next session of Parliament. The meeting in Trafalgar square was proclaimed on the ostensible ground that the square is Crown property. If under the guidance of the Home Secretary the Crown can control a popular thoroughfare and exclude meetings of the people to discuss legitimate topics, there will be an effort also to limit the power and prominence of the Crown in connection with this business. The matter will first come up in the next month. Mr. Cunninghame Graham, who has taken the earlier day, is an able and aggressive, if somewhat eccentric, young man of large fortune. He represents a decided constituency which is pretty certain to stand by him. His case has suffered somewhat by the efforts of Tyrrell and Burns to associate themselves with it. Mr. Smith, who is also standing Gladstone's defense in the courts, is also a Scotch member of Parliament and one of the three men of the Liberal party.

THE County Board is to be merely nominated for the first action on the local problem. The Finance Committee, having spent its old year recommended that the funds to all occur to disbursements of $1,000. The Taxation report that some of the items should be put within the reach of certain taxpayers by being taxed on the 1887 valuation, instead of the 1888 valuation, including lands, the averages of the change. The committee did not see fit to alter the report, but has been a wise one. After a little discussion it was agreed with that the county levy that $50,000 of the funds should be taxed to that levy and $50,000 to the 1888 levy. A few years ago there the people had a chance to vote on the question of whether the county should issue $100,000 in bonds for the erection of a new court-house. The people voted against the proposition by a large majority, and the result was that the county was compelled to rent rooms for the courts and offices. Now the county has a court-house which is a disgrace to the city, and the people are paying rent for the use of it. The Board of Commissioners should have the courage to submit the question to the people again, and the people should have the sense to vote for the bonds.

THE Canadian Commissioners have arrived in Washington, and will begin their negotiations with the United States Government to-day. The Commissioners are men of ability, and they represent a people who are anxious to secure the best terms possible for the Dominion. Canadians have a right to expect that the Commissioners will not be outwitted by the Americans. They have already paid $5,000,000 to have the fisheries protected, and they have a right to expect that they will get value for their money. The Canadians are not asking for favors, but they are entitled to receive what they have paid for. The Commissioners will be met by able men, who will do their best to secure the interests of their country. The Canadians have a strong case, and they will be fortunate if they secure the services of a good lawyer to present it. The Canadians are not asking for favors, but they are entitled to receive what they have paid for. The Commissioners will be met by able men, who will do their best to secure the interests of their country.
